GARD OF THANKS.
Owing to nervousness, we neglected to step before the curtain last Thursday evening and make the usual speech, so therefore take this method of thanking the public in general for their patronage and support.
We tried hard to give the best we had in us and the reception given us was appreciated by every member of the company.
Should we, in the future, attempt to surpass
our last achievement, we hope you will rumo-ber us in the same glorious way.

When I hear kickers berating everything in general and the home town in particular I often wonder if they are good citizens. Of course there are occasions for patriotic dissension that is beneficial and different widely from senseless knocking. Let us be thankful, however, that the latter element is usually a hopeless minority.—Exchange.

The above is true. Let us all hope the kicking in this column may amount to something in bettering the town in which we live.

All out of material—send in your woes
and groans if you have any.—

Norway Road Commissioners.
J. A. Roberts can no longer serve as road commissioner and a new one must be elected.

There is plenty of timber to select from as all the citizens are road builders
only some have had more experience
than others.

Among those whom we have heard
mentioned for the office are Eugene Millett, Geo. Wood and F. L. Starbird.
All of them have had more or less experience.

Mr. Millett has held the position here some two years, also Mr. Wood while Frank Starbird had charge of the roads in Paris before coming here.

E. E. Durgin, the grocery man, has been mentioned as a man who has had much experience, having been commissioner of roads in Poland for eight years.
Take your choice and we trust a good man will be selected as we understand a larger sum of money will be expended on the highways in Norway this year.

It is reported that the friends of Geo.
L. Hancock are urging him to become a candidate for the office.

A WINTER COAT

not only keeps cold out, but conserves body-heat; body-fat serves the same purpose, it enables us to resist unsettled elements and serves as the great source of our body-heat. Greater body-heat means richer blood, more fat, not obesity but fat which the body consumes for warmth, vitality, resistance-power—as a furnace consumes coal for heat—Scott's Emulsion does this.

A teaspoonful after each meal makes body-heat—healthy, active blood—sharpens the appetite and makes all good food do good.

It drives out and keeps out colds by raising endurance-power and creating strength.

Reject substitutes for SCOTT'S.

John, the Neighbor.

In the good old days of long ago John Blackstone was our neighbor. Kind hearted and obliging, peculiar perhaps (and who of us is not?) but a man long to be remembered, sensitive and shy as is common the way with those who live by themselves, never forgetting an injury and remembering equally well a kindness, he lived in his little "office" on the sunny slope that, as a child, I knew so well.

Many hours I have skipped along by his side through the fields and pastures, my hand tucked in his while he told me wonderful stories of his friends, both feathered and furry.

Nature was an open book to John, he knew all life along the shores of Pleasant pond, could read the story of every track and broken twig, knew from which maples came the sweetest sap, where the earliest strawberries grew and the most luscious blackberries hung from their thorny bushes. He counted the nests, birds' nests, hornets' nests and O, the wonder of it all!

Well do I remember the partridge and brook trout that came to our table through his kindness, and the checker-berry plums brought in a pliant birch-basket, all fresh and woody, which he and Spero had found while roaming the woods they loved. Or perhaps they had found delicate sugar pears or quantities of fragrant waterlilies.

Then came the long winter evenings when he came for a friendly call, sat by the fire and talked, played his "Old Zip Coon" or sang Lily Dale while I shelled white oak acorns or beechnuts with which his pockets were laden. He never heard of Thoreau or Burroughs, yet he had much of the knowledge that today makes them famous. Not from books came this wisdom but from the ever new and changing seasons in God's great open. The grandeur of the hills, the gorgeousness of the sunsets and sunrises. John knew them all, lived among their beauties all his life, then left us to make of our lives much or little.

Whenever I make a pilgrimage to the town I love so well, I go to the tiny hut, all still and lonely now, and standing by the door I say "John are you here and do you know that all my great love for nature and my meager knowledge of it began with you?"

Little do we know of the influence of one life over another. Perhaps from the world's point of view John's life was a failure, but was it?

SUMNER.

Wild Cattle.
About one month ago I was called one day just after dinner. They wanted me to go out and get the trail of a Guy Turner's cattle that had become wild and had defeated all corners of about twenty-five men and a half dozen dogs that were credited as being famous in the cattle business.

After trying for number of days with no result, several attempts were made to shoot them, Mr. Turner having employed some of the best deer hunters in our midst, and even at this method there were three days put in when Joe Cummings, a man well up in rifle practice landed one of the heifers.

Well, I took Rex and followed these men to the cattle trail. We did not go far when I took his chain off on a heifer's track that had separated from the rest of the bunch and in a very few minutes he had jumped his game and they started to circle. We cut across and gained quite a lap, soon they were in Charlie Bonney's pasture. We could hear the dog driving at his best but at about the center of this pasture and a half mile from us, we heard an awful cry from the dog, thinking as it was his first experience on cattle that he run too many chances and that she had horned him. Before long we met the dog coming on his back track. I picked him up looked and felt him over very closely but could not find a scratch on him.

He followed us along on the trail for a few rods and then set out for satisfaction as soon as we reached high ground we could hear him at the far side of Let Varney's pasture, nearly one mile away. We left the trail and struck for Kirk Spaulding's and as luck would have it, we connected near enough with them on their dogs in the Allen mountain. I succeeded in getting the dog as it was then near dark and awful hard walking. The dog was very soft as he had not been off the chain for three weeks, and this had been quite a trip for him under the circumstances.

Mr. Turner, who had been with us for about a half hour thought we had better leave the trail and start for home, and it was very agreeable to us, and early the next morning the rifle men hit the trail early and had trouble in shooting this heifer and two others. This left only one two year old steer, a rare specimen of the Hereford breed and Mr. Turner wanted to get him alive if possible.

Well, I examined Rex the next morning and found a black and blue streak one half inch wide and about four inches long, on one side, and he was so sore and lame he could hardly walk for two days. I think he hit him with a horn but it did not seem to cut through and with the best of care and thorough rubbing with skunk's oil and a light diet and slow exercising on the chain soon had him ready for work again, and my son Lionel who takes a great liking to hunting dogs has him out on the chain about every day.

Well, nothing doing until January 16 at about nine o'clock in the morning I saw Turner's steer coming up the road No. 89, occurred in the ladies' parlors of the Baptist church. Maude M. Merrick, past department president of Waterville, was the installing officer. About 70 people were present, including the only four comrades. Following is a list of the officers installed:

The Easy Laxative

In justice to yourself you should try Rexall Orderlies, your money back if you don't like them. They are a candy confection that really do give easy relief from constipation.

Good health is largely dependent upon the bowels. When they become sluggish the waste material that is thrown off by the system accumulates. This condition generates poisons which circulate throughout the body, tending to create coated tongue, bad breath, headache, dull brain action, nervousness, biliousness and other annoyances.

Avoid harsh cathartics and physics. They give but temporary relief. They often aggravate the real trouble. They are particularly bad for children, delicate or aged persons.

Rexall Orderlies

Come in tablet form, taste just like candy and are noted for their easy, soothing action upon the bowels. They don't purge, grip, cause nausea, looseness, nor the inconveniences attendant upon the use of purgatives. Their action is so pleasant that the taking of Rexall Orderlies almost becomes a desire instead of a duty.

Children like Rexall Orderlies. They are ideal for aged or delicate.
